SUPER COMPUTER

Don Spencer/Allan Caswell

Published by MCA-Gilbey

There's a super computer that can do anything.
It can count, it can smile, it can talk, it can sing.
It can run, it can jump, it can laugh, it can cry.
With a compact and portable power supply.
The super computer can pass any test,
It's specifications are ahead of the rest.
It's easy to operate, maintenance free,
There's one inside you and there's one inside me.

Chorus

It's a super computer.

It's a super computer.

It's a super computer.

What's its name?

It's a super computer.

It's your brain.

Other computers attach the 'phone,
This one comes with a mind of its own.
It replaces its own parts as soon as they're worn,
You can learn how to use it from the moment you're born.
Other computers might calculate faster,
But the super computer would still be the master.
The super computer's in charge of the lot,
With a flick of a switch it could turn them all off!

Chorus

There's a super computer inside your head.
Doesn't use buttons, has nerves instead.
The super computer is there to use,
So you can do anything you choose.
There's Apple Mac, Wang, and IBM,
But the super computer is better than them.
The super computer must be the best,
'Cause the super computer invented the rest!

Chorus x 2
