Weather Song

Don Spencer/Allan Caswell

Published by MCA-Gilbey

I don't care when skies are grey and cloudy,
And the rain begins to tumble down.
Listening to the pitter-patter,
I never frown when the rain's around.

And how I love to hear the sound of thunder
Like a big bass drum up in the sky.
Staying inside when the lightning's flashing,
Where it's warm and dry.

I don't mind the clouds at all,
For I know that the rain must fall.
But I'm happy because I know
We need the rain to make things grow.

How I love the colours of the rainbow,
When the sun comes shining through the rain.
It only takes the clouds to scatter
To see the sun again.

I don't mind the clouds at all,
For I know that the rain must fall.
But I'm happy because I know
We need the rain to make things grow.

And how I love the colours of the rainbow,
When the sun comes shining through the rain.
It only takes the clouds to scatter
To see the sun again.
To see the sun again.
To see the sun again.
